

If on a plate you're placing white,
Ne'er can the blue be at its right.
Green must never abut the red,
Unless ye'r seeking to be dead.
At either end, place no white,
If ye would live out the night.
Place no blue at the right side,
Unless the red far left abides.
When placing blue it must be said,
To either side ye must place red.

If green and white together be,
Then red and blue to right must be.
If ye place green on a pan,
Place the blue at its right hand.
When blue in pan ye have placed
On either side the white must grace.
When placing red upon the scene,
Then to the left must be the green.
A white ball placed into the pan
Requires red on either hand.

Once all is set as I have said,
Pull the lever, and watch your head.
